

A photograph of three diverse students (two women and one man) standing outdoors on a campus path, engaged in conversation. The woman on the left is wearing a black top and white skirt, the man in the middle is in a black polo and light pants, and the woman on the right is in a floral top and teal pants. The background shows a blurred campus scene with trees and other people.

Real Talk

the intersection of identity and career

There's a lot happening in the world right now. Let's talk! Career Services is continuing a series of programs to directly address career concerns of students and alumni from marginalized groups, with special attention to intersecting identities. Join us for a series of discussions focused on real issues that affect our everyday lives.

September 14, 4-5 pm

Disclosing Your Disability to an Employer

gmu.joinhandshake.com/events/790835/share_preview

Choosing to disclose a disability is a personal decision. Learn what to consider when making that decision, and how to have the conversation with your employer.

November 9, 4-5 pm

How to Find a Mentor and Advance Your Career

gmu.joinhandshake.com/events/788139/share_preview

Meet consulting practitioners with intersectional identities who are sharing their experiences and advice on seeking and/or being mentors.

December 2, 4-5 pm

Does This Employer Really Value Me?

gmu.joinhandshake.com/events/790836/share_preview

Participate in a group discussion to learn how to find employers where you can be valued for all of your identities.